

BRAND SYSTEM / 2026

Andrew Wolverton Website Brand Kit

A practical identity for creative rescue, fieldwork, media, music, and the complicated thing without a job title.

awolverton.com

A creative problem-solver with a working studio.

Bring me the thing that isn't working.

Andrew diagnoses what a messy project actually needs, then uses the right mix of strategy, making, leadership, and fieldwork to build the fix.

RESOURCEFUL

Comfortable entering ambiguity and finding the usable next move.

THEATRICAL

Rhythm, personality, and audience awareness are part of the work.

PRACTICAL

Ideas become systems, assets, decisions, and something people can use.

Creative Rescue

Build With Andrew

NYC Field Unit

The monogram is the anchor.

Use the AW mark as a confident signature, not as decoration repeated everywhere.

PRIMARY MARK / WARM PAPER

PRIMARY MARK / DEEP GREEN

USAGE RULES

- Keep clear space around the mark equal to the height of the gold underline.
- Minimum digital size: 40 px. Minimum print size: 0.5 in.
- Do not recolor, stretch, rotate, add effects, or place it over busy imagery.
- Pair it with the name only when identification is not already clear.

Warm paper. Deep green. Electric clarity.

The core palette feels grounded and editorial. Aqua supplies energy and direction. Supporting colors belong in small moments.

READABLE TEAL

SUPPORTING ACCENTS

CONTRAST RULE

Use deep green or ink for body copy on light backgrounds. Use warm white on deep green. Reserve aqua for buttons, focus states, short labels, and directional emphasis.

A voice with range.

BARLOW CONDENSED / BOLD

MAKE THE PROBLEM CLEAR.

Headlines, navigation, buttons, section numbers, and compact moments with personality.

IBM PLEX SANS

Clear enough for systems. Human enough for stories.

Use for body copy, explanations, labels, forms, captions, and interface text. Default body size: 16 px on the web and 10-11 pt in print.

DM SERIF DISPLAY

An editorial pause.

Use sparingly for quotations, reflective statements, and crafted story moments. It should feel intentional, not ornamental.

Hierarchy: 16 px minimum for small section labels. Keep body copy comfortable. Let headlines be large, compact, and short enough to breathe.

Editorial structure, studio energy.

Space should create rhythm and focus. It should never make the page feel unfinished or separate supporting copy from the idea it explains.

DESKTOP SECTION RHYTHM

Headline on the left. Explanation and proof on the right. Content controls begin below both.

ADAPTIVE NAVIGATION

Vertical chapter guide on wide screens. A compact disclosure and previous/next links when space is tight.

THE DESK PRINCIPLE

Playful and specific, but every object has a job.

Real rooms, expressive proof, one strange little friend.

Use imagery that feels lived-in and active. Andrew should appear approachable and capable. Doon adds warmth, surprise, and continuity.

PORTRAIT

Warm, direct, uncluttered.

CHARACTER SYSTEM

Personality without replacing credibility.

PERFORMANCE

Movement, audience, and evidence of practice.

Avoid generic stock-office imagery, stiff corporate portraits, decorative technology, and playful assets that cover essential information.

The system holds different kinds of work.

Project identities may have their own colors and voices. Andrew's brand supplies the framing: diagnosis, clarity, proof, and a recognizable way through.

DIGITAL FIXES

Web strategy and visitor paths

ORGANIZATION BUILDING

Mission, programs, systems, and audience

PLAYFUL PROOF

Music, interaction, and technical making

BEFORE ANYTHING GOES OUT

- ☐ Problem first
- ☐ Readable at a glance
- ☐ Proof is specific
- ☐ Play never blocks use